TULIPS

For Fall Planting

Among the early spring flowers the Tulips are the brightest and the most beautiful. As cut-flowers, they last a week to ten days. In the garden they give that touch of color that we all like,—a cheerful reminder that Spring is here. Plant bulbs anytime after the middle of September,—even in early December if the ground is open, and every assurance of success may be had.

CHOICE MIXTURE

Single Early Tulips

Contains all the most desired colors and many different varieties;—more than I list under names, giving a splendid assortment. There are yellows, whites, pinks, and brilliant reds; others with striking shadings and fancy markings,—all of which together make a very choice mixture. They all grow approximately the same height and blossom within a few days of each other. Highly recommended.

50c per doz. 25 for $1.00. $3.50 per 100.

DARWIN TULIPS

The Darwin Tulips are the pride of the Tulip family,—the “Aristocrats of Tulipdom”. These are the giant flowering tall growing tulips that bloom in this locality about Decoration Day and are much in demand for cut-flowers. Ideal for planting in groups among perennials or in front of foundation plantings of evergreens or shrubs, where they add that touch of brilliant color much needed in the early Spring before other flowers are in bloom. Below is a selected list of the cream of the Darwin Tulips, and as these kinds have been thoroughly tested by me, I can highly recommend each of the following:
